Distribution of Seeds at the South. The Commissioner of Agriculture is now daily sending to the South seeds and cereals, in accordance with the provisions of the recent law transferring $50,000 from the Freedman's Bareau fund to alo in relieving the general destitution of garden and farm seeds in the South, to give of garden and tarm seems in the South, to give to that legion new and improved varieties, and thus help to avert famine in the immediate future. The regular statistical corps of corres-pondents, so far as appointed, will represent the department in the distribution within their own counties, and agents are designated in other counties to assist in the work. Individual requests for small parcels are also regarded, and the distribution is thus made as general and the distribution is thus made as general and equal as possible. The quantity of seeds at the disposal of the Commissioner, however, will full far short of the demand and of the expectations of the people, who do not realize the extent and destitution of the country to be supplied. Com-missioner Newton is entitled to the credit of suggesting, urging, and securing this timely assistance to the Southern people.

The Official Report Relative to the Cap-ture of Jeff, Davis. Last January the House Committee on Claims was instructed to investigate and report all the facts connected with the capture of Jeff, Davis. The evidence taken pursuant to that authority has just been published, and contains a few interesting details. The main facts are the same as appeared immediately after Jeff. Davis' capture, but there are some points cleared up which have been enveloped until now in some little doubt and uncertainty. The evidence comprises a deposition of General J. H. Wilson, made before the Committee on the 27th of January last; a lengthy report by the same officer to General Grant, pearing date January 17, 1867; and reports by Generals F. F. Winslow and A. J. Atexander, Colonel Henry Harnden, Lieuienant O. P. Clinton, and private J. J. Alpin, of the 1st Wisconsin Cavalry. The report of General Wilson gives a full account of the capture, the unfortunate mistake between Colonel Perbod and Henry Henry take between Colonels Pritchard and Haruden, and the condition of the arch traitor at the moment of his apprehension. The General sticks to the old version, that Jeff. Davis was disguised partially in the attire of a temale, alluding to the snoject in the following language:—"During the firing of the skirmish just referred to, the adjutant of the 4th Michigan, Lieutenant J. G. Dickinson, after having looked to the security of the Rebel camp, and sent forward a number of the men who had strargled, was about to go to the front bimselt, when his attention was called by one of the mer to three persons in female attire, who had apparently just left one of the large tents near by, and were moving towards the three woods. He started at once towards them, and called out, 'Halt.' But not hearing him, or not caring to obey, they continued to move off. Just then they were confronted by three men, under direction of Corporal Munger, coming from the opposite direc-tion. The corporal recognized one of the persons as Davis, advanced carbine, and demanded his surrender. The stree persons halted, and by the actions of the two, who alterwards turned out to be women, all doubt as to the identity of the third person was removed. The individuals thus arrested were found to be Miss Howell, Mrs. Davis, and Jefferson Davis. As they walked back to the tent from which they had tried to escape. Lieuterant Dickinson observed that Davis' high top boots were not covered by his disguise, which fact, probably, led to his recognition by Corporal Munger. As the friends of Davis have strenu-ously denied that he was disguised as a woman, it may not be improper to specify the exact articles of woman's apparel which he had upon him when first seen by Lieutenant Dickinson and Corporal Munger. The former states that he 'was one of the three persons dressed in woman's attire, and had a black mantle wrapped about his head, through the top of which could be seen locks of his hair.' Captain G. W. Lawton, of the 4th Michigan Cavalry, states explicitly, upon the testimony of the officers present, that Davis, in addition to his full suit of Confederate grey, had on 'a lady's waterproof closk, gathered at the waist, with a shawl drawn over the head, and carrying a tin pail.' Colonel Pritchard says, in his official report, that he received from Mrs. Davis, on board the steamer Clyde, off Fortress Monroe, a waterproof cloak or robe, which was identified by the men wh was worn by Davis as a disguise, and which at the time of the capture. He secured the balance of the disguise the next day. It consisted of a shawl, which was identified in a similar manner by both Mrs. Davis and the men. From these circumstances, there seems to be no doubt whatever that Davis sought to avoid capture by assuming the dress of a woman, or that the ladies of the party endea-vored to pass him off upon his captors as one of

BY "GRIS."

All eminent men have their "last words," just before giving their mortal coil the shake, and these words are often quoted and preserved. Some of them sppear to make a study of rendering their closing remarks as effective as possible; if they didn't, they wouldn't be eminent men. No common man ever thinks it worth while to say anything smart just because he is going to die; if he does, he is sure to make a failure of it. What a world of grandeur in the final exclamation of Bonaparte—"Head of the Army!"—and what prophetic meaning was em-bodied in Webster's "I still live!"

All eminent men have to die some time, which, in many cases, isn't altogether a public calamity, and the eminent men with whom the present day is so lavishly endowed must naturally pass away. They will or course be a little anxious about their last words—be concerned, as it were, to state about the right thing as they depart, and in the hurry of going this might not readily present itself. It has occurred to us that we might be doing our eminent men a service by suggesting some "last word-," which they can adopt if they choose to do so. We don't charge anything for them:—

Andy Johnson—"Oh! Moses."

Jeff, Davis—"I only ask to be let alone."
John Morrissev—"Throw up the sponge."
Ben, Butler—"Bottled up again."
Gen, Grant—"I bave fought it out." Banks—"Let 'em slide." Forrest-"You have sent for me-and I have horses were stolen.

General Hancock had reached Fort Zara, and attempted with the Indian scouts to find the trail of the Cheyennes, but was un-uccessful. He then surrounded their camp, but before commencing an attack sent forward messengers arready. The camp was found deto propose a treaty. The camp was found de-serted, and most of their property abandoned. General Hancock is supposed to be now on

About one thousand Indian warriors passed the war path. Downer's station, going South. They are probably the same Indians who burned Leokout station. Passengers by the Smoky Hill coach to-day report 2000 to 3000 Cheyennes and Sloux on the road. Sixty United States express horses have been stolen this week. The coach passed General Custer at Fort Hayes, from Hancock's command, where they had halted for provisions. The Indians seen were all on the war path, and thus far had eluded the troops.
